ARIZONA NATIVE EARNS DOCTOR OF PHYSICAL THERAPY DEGREE FROM MIDWESTERN UNIVERSITY

GLENDALE, Arizona (June 2024)— Samariah Jenohn Riggins, D.P.T., of Phoenix, Arizona has completed the Doctor of Physical Therapy (D.P.T.) degree at the College of Health Sciences (CHS) of Midwestern University. Conferring of degrees took place in a graduation ceremony held at Midwestern University's Glendale Campus Auditorium on May 31, 2024.

Dr. Riggins is the daughter of Phoenix residents Eliza Harper and Charles Riggins. She graduated from Mountain Pointe High School in 2016, and received her B.S. in Exercise Science from Northern Arizona University in 2019. While at Midwestern, she served as the Health Outreach through Medicine and Education (H.O.M.E.) Coordinator and Physical Therapy Student Ambassador. After graduation, she plans to practice physical therapy in Phoenix, Arizona.

Understanding Hoarding Disorder Among Older Adults

This presentation looks at several important factors including: the underlying components to hoarding disorder, research that explores the life span theory, the importance of the DSM-5-TR criteria and co-occurring disorders as well as the various intrinsic and extrinsic influencers that can either help or hinder hoarding behavior. The goal is to introduce someone to evidence-based information vs. stereotypes and stigmas that accompany hoarding behavior. There is a group activity for the purpose of identifying perception bias in the professional/family/community member as well as tips on effective engagement and communication. Lastly, there is a section that discusses what people living with hoarding disorder want others to know and how they can better help.

1. Distinguish the difference between clutter, hoarding, squalor and collecting.
 2. The difference between animal hoarding versus object hoarding.
 3. Increase understanding of perceptions that can help/hinder when helping those with hoarding disorder.
 4. An increased knowledge of the causes of hoarding behavior
